The Iron Route

The Iron Route is filled with the traces and memories of an old world that forged the identity and industrious character of Biscay. The stunning moonlike views that dominate this land attest to the rise and decline of open pit mining, which transformed entire towns and landscapes.

The route starts in Trapagaran, the mining heart of the Basque Country. The former open pit mines, now turned into lakes and trekking trails, are well visible from La Reineta funicular. A few steps from here, we will stumble across La Arboleda mining village, one of the best-kept in Europe, which affords unrivalled sweeping views of the surrounding valleys.

The exploitation of mineral riches brought great prosperity to Enkarterri in the 19th century, but also wiped out entire towns and transformed the landscapes beyond recognition. The Peñas Negras (Black Hills) Interpretation Centre, located in the municipality of Ortuella, has documented these changes and makes a great vantage point to marvel at the stunning mining panoramas.

The route moves on to the neighbourhood of Gallarta, in Abanto-Zierbena, where the Basque Country Mining Museum lies. Looking over the impressive Concha II pit, the museum boasts a great collection of mining artefacts and guides visitors through a turbulent past marked by strikes and social unrest, which gained the region and its dwellers a subversive reputation.

The area has undergone an impressive regeneration in recent years. La Arena Beach, running along the coastline of Muskiz and Zierbena, is regarded as a favourite surfing spot in the Basque Country. The retreat of the tides grants an exciting natural spectacle that can be seen on full display from Itsaslur (Muskiz), a promenade meandering gently through the rough cliffs of the Bay of Biscay along 2 kilometres (1.24 miles).

The nearby port of Zierbena still preserves its traditional charm, filled with fishing boats and pleasure crafts, not to mention top-quality restaurants where traditional seafood and grilled fish recipes are combined with the latest culinary trends – a deserved treat for discerning palates.

Iron has been ingrained in the DNA of Enkarterri from time immemorial. The Romans were well aware of its mineral riches, and blacksmiths were admired and much sought-after in the Middle Ages. The town of Muskiz has kept the flame of El Pobal Forge burning since the 16th century. Every Saturday at noon the blacksmith delights visitors with a demonstration that engulfs the old building in flames to create all kinds of objects: ploughs, hammers, nails...

Hardship is replaced by luxury and glamour on the way to neighbouring Galdames, a municipality 30 kilometres (18 mi) west of Bilbao. Loizaga Tower, a 14th-century stronghold nestled amid woods and vineyards, harbours Europe's largest Rolls-Royce collection. A statue of local ship-owner Martínez de las Rivas stands on a pedestal in San Pedro neighbourhood, not too far from the tower. It is considered one of the most outstanding honorary monuments in the Basque Country.

The town of Sopuerta was once the political centre of Enkarterri. The majestic former Abellaneda House of Assembly, now converted into Las Encartaciones Museum, embodied for centuries the land's political rights and uniqueness. The museum is free and provides chronological insights into the history and life of the region and its people.

Shhhhh Enkarterri · The Iron Route

In Sopuerta's La Linde neighbourhood, once a booming mining community, we will find old calcining kilns listed as industrial heritage. Its surroundings are now dominated by walking trails and recreational areas – a fantastic spot to go on a picnic, enjoy a walk, ride a bike or just gaze at nature's exuberance at a former industrial site.

The route is crossed by the Montes de Hierro (Iron Mountains) Greenway, the longest in Biscay. Running over 40 kilometres (24 miles) along the old mine railways, it will take us on a journey marked by enthralling views, diverse wildlife – with large populations of European minks, salmon and white vultures – and outdoor activities for everyone.

Decades after the closing of the last pit, the echoes of the mines still resound through Enkarterri and beyond. According to legend, the shout uttered to celebrate the victories of Athletic Club was coined here: Alirón! With a broken accent and undisguised joy, the miners communicated the extraction of pure iron – that is, “all iron” – to their English bosses, as it brought a generous bonus. The Iron Route keeps their memories alive throughout a journey filled with striking panoramas, unrivalled museums and charming corners.

Medieval Bridge (Balmaseda)

The Kadagua Route

River Kadagua enters the town of Balmaseda impetuously and meanders eastwards through lush landscapes where nature reigns supreme.

San Severino Church (Balmaseda)

River Kadagua is deeply ingrained in Enkarterri's history and identity. Its waters greeted merchants and pilgrims, turned red during the bloody wars of the Middle Ages and oversaw the construction of majestic palaces and houses in the Renaissance. Today the river flows undisturbed eastwards into the Estuary of Bilbao through lush landscapes where nature reigns supreme.

The river enters Balmaseda – the first town founded in Biscay – so impetuously that its mighty current triggered for decades the sophisticated machinery of La Encartada Beret Factory. The textile mill is the starting point of the Kadagua Route: a time travel experience to the dawn of the Basque Country's industrialization and the origins of our most distinctive garment: the txapela or beret.

The factory, now a museum, opened in the late 19th century and has reached our days as it was originally designed. The still-functioning pulleys, straps and looms, along with its period decoration, transport the visitor to the roots of Enkarterri's renowned textile tradition.

The old quarter of Balmaseda awaits us on the other side of the Medieval Bridge, once a crossroads for merchants and artisans on their way to the hinterland or the not-too-distant ports. It was one of the gateways to the city and used to hold a customs post when such inner demarcations existed.

La Encartada Factory Museum (Balmaseda)

Balmaseda has preserved its medieval street structure, consisting of three long, narrow streets crossed by alleyways, all leading to ancient squares. Architectural landmarks spread throughout the town centre, such as Gothic San Severino church, Baroque Horcasitas and Urrutia palaces or the City Hall, known as The Mosque for its large columned portico, reminiscent of Muslim architecture in the Iberian Peninsula.

Two museums, devoted to history and Balmaseda's well-known Living Passion, attest to centuries of local history and traditions. The town is proud of the Holy Week procession that year after year takes over its streets and culminates in a breathtaking Crucifixion represented by a neighbour.

The route moves on to the neighbouring town of Zalla. The Bolunburu recreational area, bathed by the river, is perfect to take a break and refuel while discovering its monumental complex, comprising a tower-house, the Santa Ana Chapel, the ruins of an iron forge and the walls of a medieval fort.

Zalla, a town of tales and exorcisms, was for centuries a transit point for pilgrims and travellers of all sort. It was part of the Wool Route and the old Mountain Way to Santiago de Compostela. Legend has it that pilgrims found protection from evil spirits and consumption in San Pedro de Zarikete and San Pantaleón churches, not far from where the Inquisition burned local Lucía de Aretxaga at the stake – her alleged crime: being a witch.

Enkarterri was the theatre of ferocious civil wars that ravaged the region in the late Middle Ages. Impregnable forts known as tower-houses populate the green valleys of the region, bearing witness to the brutality of such conflicts. The Murga Palace, now the Town Hall, was originally designed as a stronghold. Later on, as the end of the wars prompted great prosperity, it was converted into a Baroque palace surrounded by a garden filled with exotic trees.

The municipality of Güeñes also benefited from the end of the wars. The splendid Santa María Church, embellished by a Gothic portal, presides over the elegant square named after it. It is one of the great architectural landmarks of Enkarterri, as well as Villa Urrutia, a 1910 sumptuous mansion turned into the Güeñes Town Hall. Its former gardens are home to dozens of sculptures that make up ARENATZarte, an outdoor park where nature and art blend together.

Leandro Urrutia, an affluent textile merchant, had the house built for his family after amassing a fortune in Mexico. The gardens cover 1.5 hectares (3 acres) filled with majestic trees and plants brought from all over the world. A pergola and a small pond give the complex a romantic touch – an unbeatable setting to walk, read and indulge in contemplation with the murmur of River Kadagua in the background.

Mr. Urrutia was an indiano – a local who had made a fortune in the Americas and then came back to Enkarterri to flaunt his wealth. The magnificence and extravagance of their houses, all boasting big gardens and a revolutionary architecture, preside over the valley of Gordexola. Attracted by the promise of affluence and success, many young people followed their steps and crossed the pond, but very few of them had such a good luck.

Before winding to its end, River Kadagua enters the town of Alonsotegi, one of the steepest municipalities in the Basque Country and a must-see destination for nature lovers, as it is located at the feet of Mounts Ganekogorta and Pagasarri. The latter keeps 17th-century ice houses in its summit, a great food preservative at the time. Ice was so highly valued that locals used to beg for snow in the temples and chapels that populate the town.

River Kadagua keeps meandering eastwards into the Estuary of Bilbao, leaving behind a land where history intertwines with modernity in the heart of nature, next to the city of Bilbao.

Ventana del Relux (Karrantza)

Western Valleys

Nature reigns unspoiled in the westernmost valleys of Enkarterri. An impressive network of caves and chasms extends beneath their karstic mountains and green pastures. Welcome to a record-breaking land of immense scenic views and surprises everywhere.

Traslaviña (Artzentales)

The route starts in Artzentales, a picturesque valleys of scattered country houses surrounded by rocky hills. This quiet and untroubled town was once a bustling railway junction. The trains cut through the mountainous fields bound for the coastline, where the iron ore was loaded into boats and vessels. The railways were dismantled decades ago and turned into the Montes de Hierro (Iron Mountains) Greenway, a 42-kilometre (26 mi) trail that starts next to the Traslaviña neighbourhood train station.

Enkarterri is packed with endless paths and hiking trails. The Tejea forest, located in the Cantabrian enclave of Villaverde, will take us into a lush jungle of beech, oak and chestnut trees. The steep and rough nature of these valleys determined the daily life of locals for centuries. The Villaverde Valley Ethnographic Centre leads the traveller to those old days.

Neighbouring Turtzioz is a charming valley with a character of its own. It boasts a distinctive kind of country house that combines elements from Basque and Cantabrian architecture, such as large flowery balconies. The houses were built along the course of River Agüera after the end of the medieval wars that ravaged Enkarterri, adding to the bucolic setting of the region.

Prosperity gave way to an era where leisure took on a new significance. Small bullrings were built alongside churches to cheer up summer festivals and entertain the faithful after mass. They can be seen in Artzentales, Karrantza, Sopuerta and Turtzioz. Although bullfights are rarely held today, the rings are perfect to take a break and enjoy the surroundings. The San Antolín complex, in Artzentales, stands out with its arena, an unfinished church and a picnic area.

San Roque Church and bullring

Few places breathe as much tranquillity as the westernmost lands of Enkarterri, guarded by the karstic mountains of the Armañón Nature Park. Located between the towns of Karrantza and Turtzioz, the park enjoys a special microclimate that covers its green pastures with lush Mediterranean oak and beechwoods.

An impressive network of more than two hundred caves and chasms extends beneath Armañón. La Torca del Carlista, Europe's largest sinkhole, is accessed from here – only if you are a professional speleologist, such are its depth and extension. But none of them is as well-known as the Pozalagua Cave, voted Repsol Guide's Best Spot in 2013.

Pozalagua is a natural wonder that harbours the greatest concentration of eccentric stalactites in the world. These glittering structures sprout at whim and seem to defy gravity, intertwining in every direction. They make up an impressive patchwork of shapes, a surreal underground cathedral that spreads out into the bowels of the Armañón Nature Park.

Right opposite the cave, sculpted in a former dolomite quarry, the Pozalagua auditorium makes a great venue for concerts, operas and plays due to its perfect scale and acoustics. A few steps away, the Armañón Interpretation Centre unveils all the secrets the park has to hide – and offers us a terrace to relish the sweeping vistas of the Ordunte Mountains, a protected range that is home to Mounts Zalama and Balgerri, two of the best-known peaks in Enkarterri and Biscay.

The cave was accidentally discovered in 1957, when an explosion at the quarry opened a hole in the mountain and uncovered a secret, dazzling world. The mineral extracted here was airlifted to the nearby Dolomite Factory. The factory is now a museum and has been listed as a protected site due to the huge pulleys that used to move the aerial tram, which cannot be seen anywhere else in the Basque Country.

Karrantza Valley, the largest in Biscay, makes a great family destination surrounded by nature. Karpin Fauna is a wildlife refuge centre for animals that cannot be returned to the natural habitat. Many of them have been rescued from illegal trafficking or abandonment, and here they find a proper environment to make a difference in their lives.

Karrantza proudly claims a diverse heritage. Sumptuous villas, palaces and temples abound in the valley. San Andrés de Biáñez Church is worth a visit. For generations, it hid a 16th-century Renaissance fresco discovered by sheer chance after an altarpiece was removed during some restoration works. Both the church and the painting can be visited on request.

Armañón Nature Park

Neighbouring Lanestosa is the smallest and least populated town in Enkarterri. It seems impervious to time, with its narrow, cobblestone alleys filled with large balconied houses. The streets of this village have preserved the same structure since its foundation in the 13th-century. A medieval stone bridge and the old lime kilns add to the allure of the place.

Lanestosa has been a privileged witness to history since time immemorial. It was for centuries a strategic crossroads on the way from Castile to the port of Laredo. Its surroundings were already inhabited in the Old Stone Age, as shown by the paintings found inside Los Judíos (The Jews) Cave. The cavern is now home to Koben Koba, the first Palaeolithic rock art interpretation centre in Europe. It is located very near the route emperor Charles V followed on his way to the Monastery of Yuste, where he retired and died after his abdication.

Located halfway between the cities of Bilbao and Santander, the western valleys of Enkarterri preserve a distinctive character that has lived up to our days. Nature, heritage and gastronomy go hand in hand to offer us a matchless chance to discover a fascinating culture, take a break and refuel amid incredible views.

Surprising architecture

Indiano houses

These sumptuous mansions were built in the late 19th century by the so-called indianos or locals who had made a fortune in the Americas and then came back to flaunt their wealth – a competition of precious extravagance still on display.

These indiano houses populate the valleys of Gordexola, Lanestosa and Karrantza with their large gardens filled with exotic trees and a revolutionary architecture for the time. For years the buildings signalled the prosperity not only of the owners, but also of the place, as the enriched neighbours used to finance public and charitable works in their towns.

Turtzioz country houses

The Turtzioz country house combines elements from Basque and Cantabrian country houses, such as large flowery balconies. These sober yet majestic buildings emerged near the course of River Agüera in the mid-18th century, as trade prompted a new, widely-shared prosperity in the region. Construction came to an end by the early 20th century.

Adding to the bucolic setting, this distinctive kind of country house abounds in the towns of Turtzioz, Artzentales and Villaverde Valley (Cantabria), scattered all over the mountainous lands of the region.

Medieval tower houses

Enkarterri was the theatre of ferocious wars that ravaged the region in the late Middle Ages. Impregnable forts known as tower houses were erected between the 14th and 16th centuries to protect feudal overlords. These forts had a homogenous contour that allowed for residency and defensive purposes, and became in the end a symbol of social grandeur and prestige.

The feuding Gamboa and Oñaz factions confronted each other with extreme violence. For centuries Enkarterri endured prolonged hardship and squalor. On a brighter note, the end of the wars prompted an unknown prosperity.

Muñatones Castle

Muñatones Castle was the culmination of a long construction process lasting from the 14th to the 15th centuries, amid the ferocious factional wars that ravaged Enkarterri. It is without a doubt one of the finest examples of the region's architectural heritage and has been designated a landmark.

Mighty nobleman Don Lope García de Salazar was born in the castle, where he wrote the first history book on the Biscayan people, a first-hand testimony to the blessings and curses of life.

Did you know that...?

... it was a tradition in western Enkarterri to build small bullrings alongside churches and chapels to cheer up summer festivals and entertain the faithful after mass?

The end of the ferocious wars that ravaged the region in the Middle Ages gave way to prosperity and, for the first time, leisure took on a new significance. This picturesque sample of religious architecture can be found throughout the towns of Artzentales, Karrantza, Sopena and Turtzioz.

... for centuries, superstitious beliefs in spirits, witchcraft and the like were deeply ingrained in the town of Zalla? Legend has it that pilgrims and devotees walked to San Pedro de Zarikete Church to seek protection from evil spirits.

In the nearby San Pantelón Church, the faithful used to pull a hat down over their ears and pray to find relief from headaches and consumption. Not far from here the Inquisition burned Lucía de Aretxaga at the stake accused of being a witch.

... an invaluable Renaissance fresco was discovered by sheer chance during the renovation works of San Andrés de Biáñez Church, in Karrantza? The huge painting emerged after an 18th-century wooded altarpiece had to be removed.

The church can be visited on request. The guided tour will also explain the significance the indianos –locals who had made a fortune in the Americas and then came back to flaunt their wealth– had in supporting the arts and religion.

Two routes to Santiago

The Northern Way and the Old Mountain Route

Are you planning on walking the Camino de Santiago? Two routes of the legendary Saint James' Way go through Enkarterri: the popular Northern Way and the little-known Old Mountain Route.

The Norther Route starts in Portugalete and passes through the towns of Ortuella, Abanto-Zierbena and Muskiz along the coastline of the Bay of Biscay. Stopes are rarely steep, so it's absolutely bike friendly. The sweeping mining vistas and the proximity of the sea add to the appeal of this route marked by natural heritage. A pilgrims' hostel located in the neighbourhood of Pobeña (Muskiz) will provide travellers with affordable accommodation from May to September.

The little-known Old Mountain Route, unjustly forgotten, is filled with outstanding landmarks – and many detours to take. It starts in Bilbao and heads westwards through Alonsotegi, Güeñes, Zalla and Balmaseda. This route used to be a bustling road followed by merchants and travellers. It is populated by stunning mansions, palaces and defensive tower houses from the Middle Ages.

Armañón Nature Park

Armañón is one of Enkarterri's natural treasures. The karst terrain of the park, located between the municipalities of Karrantza and Turtzioz, is covered by fertile green pastures and rough stone hills that grant Armañón a special microclimate. This is why Mediterranean oak and beech woods grow lush here, so near the Bay of Biscay.

Armañón Nature Park affords immense scenic views of the surrounding valleys. An impressive network of more than two hundred caves and chasms extends beneath the ground, some of them open only to speleologists, such as La Torca del Carlista, Europe's largest sinkhole.

None is as well known, however, as the Pozalagua Cave, voted Repsol Guide's Best Spot in 2013.

Pozalagua offers a unique spectacle: the greatest concentration of eccentric stalactites in the world. These dazzling structures seem to defy gravity, intertwining in every direction with the strangest of shapes.

The underground chamber makes for an impressive sight. The gangway meanders through columns, flowstones and an almost dry lake above which thousands of eccentric stalactites grow lawlessly, depicting what seems to be an immense coral reef. The end of the tour offers an unrivalled view of the cave and its grandeur, marked by bizarre structures and shapes.

The Armañón Interpretation Centre, located next to the cave, disseminates the park's wildlife and geological features. Numerous endangered species live here, under the watch of Mount Armañón, the highest peak, at 859 metres (2,808 ft). Its round summit, often crowned with snow in the winter, conveys a sense of the serenity the place breathes.

Ordunte Mountains

Mount Kolitza (Balmaseda)

The Ordunte mountain range stretches over 20 kilometres (13 mi) along the south of Karrantza Valley, forming one of Enkarterri's natural borders. Its highest peak, Mount Zalama, stands at 1,366 metres (4,500 ft) above the sea level, although many other summits here also surpass the 1,000-metre mark.

Beech forests, mountain grasslands, heaths and bogs cover the terrain. The Ordunte Mountains are home to a variety of endemic plants, some of which are listed in Natura 2000, a network of nature protection areas in the European Union.

Wildlife is equally abundant and diverse within the range, including some endangered species such as Bonelli's eagle or a variety of vultures.

Although not the highest in the range, Mount Kolitza (879 metres; 2,883 ft) is probably its best-known peak. For centuries horns were played and bonfires lighted on its summit to convene communal meetings.

Humans and mountains have intertwined in Enkarterri from the beginning. It is not a coincidence that San Roque Church, one of the very few Romanesque-style temples in Biscay, stands on the summit, overlooking the impressive 360° panorama of the surrounding valleys the mountain affords.

Mount Koltza can be reached from a signposted trail starting right behind the Balmaseda Town Hall – a 6-kilometre (3.7 mi) route that ascends the mountain leaving behind picturesque country houses, txakoli vineyards and beech woods.

Triano Mountains

La Arboleda (Trapagaran)

Iron has been ingrained in the DNA of Enkarterri from time immemorial. The Romans were well aware of the vast mineral riches the Triano Mountains harboured, although the exploitation of iron ore deposits did not begin until the 19th-century, forging breathtaking moonlike panoramas.

The open-pit mines brought great prosperity to Enkarterri, but also wiped out entire towns and transformed the landscapes beyond recognition. Some industrial facilities and a few miners' houses remain standing decades after the closing of the last mine, in 1993. An impressive regeneration effort began then and has continued to our days.

The Peñas Negras (Black Hills) Interpretation Centre, located in the municipality of Ortuella, has documented these changes and makes a great lookout to marvel at the stunning mining panoramas that dominate the Triano Mountains. Peñas Negras tries to convey the impact mining had on nature and the character of the people. Strikes and social unrest were indeed common in the first half of the 20th century, gaining the region a subversive reputation.

The regeneration can be seen following the path of the old mine railways, now turned into the Montes de Hierro (Iron Mountains) Greenway, the longest in Biscay. Running over 40 kilometres (24 miles), it shows the heritage of a region dramatically transformed by human activity.

The route follows the River Barbadun basin, a journey listed in Nature 2000 and marked by a diverse wildlife with large populations of European minks, salmon and white vultures. Itinerary: Traslaviña (Artzentales), Sopena, Galdames, Muskiz, Abanto-Zierbena and Zierbena.

A land of flavours

Cuisine can be an art in Enkarterri. Here you will not only take delight in our time-honoured cuisine, but will do so in a tranquil countryside setting dominated by rivers, forests and hills. Whether in an ancient convent or a typical Basque country house, this gastronomic treat was long overdue.

Balmaseda's railway stew makes a spirited beginning. It dates to the 19th century, when engine drivers made use of the train's steam and clattering to cook a uniquely flavoured stew. The red beans are cooked with pieces of rib, black pudding, bacon and chorizo over a low heat of coal that replicates the original cooking technique – a process that can take up to five hours.

Diners are recommended to be patient and relish a glass of txakoli – the dry, sparkling quintessential Basque wine – or perhaps a chilled beer, for brewing is an art deeply ingrained in the region. A select vermouth adds up to the joyous beverage experience.

Enkarterri's cuisine has been mentioned by Slow Food, an international movement aimed at preserving good taste and tradition from the threat of culinary impoverishment.

Zalla's purple onion – sweet, not very spicy and certainly juicy – makes a good example of the region's gastronomic diversity.

Enkarterri produces top-quality milk from which a wide range of dairy products is made. The exclusive Latxa native sheep breed gives cheese a creamy and tangy flavour. Our confectioners have preserved pastry recipes for generations, gaining our desserts and sweets a well-deserved fame. It is not a coincidence that Kaitxo's chocolate – the white variety, to be precise – has been awarded as one of the best in the world.

Enkarterri meets the sea through La Arena Beach. Taste and eyes come to good terms in Zierbena, where guests will enjoy superior grilled fish and seafood recipes at waterfront restaurants stroked by a gentle breeze.

We invite you to visit us in Enkarterri and discover our award-winning culinary tradition. Bon appétit!

Wines steeped in history

Txakoli is the quintessential Basque wine – a dry, sparkling white variety known for its fruity and acidic flavour, and deeply steeped in history.

Enkarterri has been a wine region for centuries. The txakolis produced here are well-structured in comparison with those from other areas in the Basque Country. This happens because Enkarterri enjoys a favourable microclimate for grape growth. It is not a coincidence that the largest txakoli vineyard in the Basque Country is here, in Zalla.

A Living Passion in Balmaseda

The town of Balmaseda becomes a living stage for the Holy Week, when hundreds of neighbours take to the streets to perform the last hours of Christ's life. Religious or not, the sheer joy of theatrical performance has positioned Balmaseda's Living Passion as a major cultural event in the Basque Country, drawing in thousands of people from around the world.

It all begins on Good Thursday. Jesus, having been betrayed by one of his disciples, warns them his end is near. Later, after the Last Supper, he will be arrested on the Mount of Olives and taken to Caiaphas.

On Good Friday, before Pilate's Court, Christ is condemned to death. A repentant Judas Iscariot hangs himself as the Messiah makes his way to the cross. On Calvary Jesus dies crucified.
